Overview	Land professionals must have an in-depth understanding of mineral laws and principles that affect drilling for oil and gas as well as how those principles are applied in the various states. This module opens with a lecture on Oil & Gas Law including the Rule of Capture (ROC), the dominant mineral estate and the doctrine of correlative rights. We also look at the implied covenants in the oil and gas lease - that is, clauses that the courts read into the oil and gas lease even though they are not stated in the lease itself. We then turn to environmental laws, specifically laws that impact drilling. This provides the opportunity to look at frac'ing and the issues surrounding it as it relates to the environment.
